Timestamp	Walk me through what a typical day looks like for you, from when you wake up to when you go to sleep.	Who are the people you interact with most regularly, and how did those relationships come about?	Can you describe a moment, either personal or one you've witnessed, where someone felt genuinely connected? What made it feel that way?	In your experience, what does loneliness actually look like day to day? What are the signs, spoken or unspoken?	What do you think stops people from admitting they're lonely or asking for help, even when they clearly need it?	What existing solutions or efforts have you seen that try to address this, and what's missing or falling short?	What would the smallest meaningful change look like in someone's daily life if this problem were genuinely solved?	[Solution Provider] What have you tried that didn't work, and what did that teach you about the user or the problem?	[Solution Provider] What's the hardest part of getting elderly or isolated users to adopt and stick with your solution, is it awareness, access, trust, or something else?	[Solution Provider] Where do you see genuine whitespace problems nobody is solving well, or users nobody is reaching effectively?	[Frontline Workers] What does loneliness actually look like when you encounter it what are the specific signs that tell you someone is really struggling?	[Frontline Workers] What do well-meaning interventions get wrong most often, and what does it look like when something genuinely works?	[Frontline Workers Are there groups by age, gender, ethnicity, or living situation that consistently fall through the cracks of existing programmes?	[Child with Elderly Parents] How much do you actually know about what your parent does on a typical weekday who they see, how they spend their hours?	[Child with Elderly Parents] Is there something your parent does or says that you read as a sign they need more connection, even if they'd never say so outright?	[Child with Elderly Parents] If a solution existed that could give your parent genuine daily companionship, what would need to be true for you to feel comfortable introducing it to them and what would make you distrust it?	[Lonely Elderly] Before [your spouse passed / your children moved out / you retired], who did you spend most of your time with and what did that feel like compared to now?	[Lonely Elderly] Is there something you know how to do well, cook, fix things, give advice, that you haven't had the chance to share with anyone lately?	[Lonely Elderly] If a younger person or neighbour wanted to spend time with you regularly, what would make that feel natural rather than like charity?
21/05/2026 12:50:31	morning: -visit active aging centres (seniors activity) -conduct sessions to teach seniors how to use tech -review their progress, facilitate group work afternoon: -pitching organisations e.g. nursing home, create new angle and new market -old folks home -many ways for organisations to reach out to old folks others: -investor relations -pilot collaboration going -usual tech stuff, conducting sprints	Internally -product guy -feedback on user sessions -ops guy -run engagement sessions externally -seniors -caregivers (how to make their life easier) -organisations in the space	Almost every engagement sessions: -elderlies actually connected to AI and willing to share everything -strong affection at the start and hyperengaged	-worst i've seen is nursing home -lose the ability to interact with outside world -akin to being a baby (both physical and mental) -people taking care of you don't even understand your language -throwing of temper	-usually extremes (1) people with very strong personalities -never learnt how to compromise and create meaningful (2) over reliance on someone before -when losing the person, they broke -elderlies especially after they lose their "forced structure" e.g. school and work	active aging centres, elderly programs -fiscal support e.g. US vs EU -falling short depends on where's the benchmark -Singapore try to be between a welfare vs non-welfare model -very institutionalised -implementations fall short of human-element, e.g. a caretaker may just be a caretaker but not one that provides care.	-someone they can talk/banter with every day -cannot be AI	-afterwards they figure out certain patterns and it becomes less personal/affectionate -even with LLM etc. after many many interactions, they lose the feeling. but differs from person to person, some may be after months, some can continue engaging for very long	-boredom, as this is an AI solution, they sooner or later figured it out. -there's no scaled way to reach out to seniors	-social media catered to seniors -hybrid AI-human communication memory lane x omegle
22/05/2026 14:13:28	grandma started showing signs of dementia -moved in to live with interviewee -very difficult to get grandma to take medicine but do so every morning -grandma wasn't even able to tap in and out of condo apartment -interviewee was still working but has to check in through the day -lunch time call to make sure food delivered -come home to feed dinner and medicine after work	-no relatives willing to help -so no people to interact with except for the on-demand caregivers	-when she reminisces about her younger days, and interviewee ask questions about her day e.g. what she was like, who were her friends -the first moment when she meets interviewee after period of being away, she glows up when she recognises her face	-not being able to physically or mentally communicate with others	-grandma had super strong personality, so nobody wanted to offer help -she had too much pride to ask	Homage companionship -appreciated by interviewee but grandma didn't appreciate it and asked to stop -interviewee continued due to safety and having an eye	-having someone that can ensure both physical and mental wellness so that people around can be assured							-very familiar, as interviewee receives daily reports from assisted living centres	-never said outrightly -she will Only asked for her son (interviewee's uncle)	-can only see that once she moved into assisted living, conditions really improved. -consistency is the most important in whatever solutions -comfortable with AI only because grandma has dementia and probably can't tell between real or AI. e.g. if she could have communicated with uncle in later days, she would have been very happy.
24/05/2026 18:47:35	wake up in the morning, eat breakfast, think what to cook today, cook lunch - one pot of curry / dal, eat with rice, chapati, watch news on TV, dosai idli, radio and TV - every hour, scold the children I live with, but eat alone. Does not own a mobile phone, only landline. babysitting grand grand children.	daughters who live with me, mainly family who live with me. no one outside.		felt lonely once spouse passed away. did not show emotion and only scold the children, negative thinking - connect one thing to another and think of bad scenarios. very high expectations from my kids.	I will ask help from my caregivers freely and feel comfortable.										mother is very sharp and will ask me for help. No need to look for signs.			I teach cooking to grand children and makes me feel more connected.	I would want my children to look after me, but if really needed I can take help from others, but it wont feel natural.
25/05/2026 12:10:45	Spoke to gentleman outside Active Ageing center in Toa Payoh. He is 70ishh years old. Lives with his wife. His son and daughter in law also lives close to his home but not in the same apartment. He is retired and frequenctly visits Active Ageing Center as there are activities to do at the center, people he can meet, and a small hawker center nearby. So he can spend 4-5 hours a day around. Active ageing center had a games session going on with student volunteers from nearby school. At least 30-35 seniors were in the session along with students playing some games. on regular days, wake up and get ready to go outside. Doesnt like being at home. Want to be outside, will come to the coffee shop/ hawker center. If there are activities at the Active Ageing center that he likes, he will attend it. Otherwise just hand outside as he at least see other people there. He has been doing this for a few years and now know people to talk to as well. Around holidays there will be activities like joss paper burning, CNY celebration that happen in the same area - so he can be part of that. he will have lunch and sometime dinner as well at the coffee shop. before going back home. Over weekends or other days, his son will visit and he will have lunch / dinner with him and daughter in law	Wife, lives with him. He will have mostly breakfast and dinner with her. He now interacts with people around coffee shop and active ageing center	I asked : what do you look forward to every day. Even if there is no activity he participates in, he will come and sit around the active ageing center as he can meet people, see people. He looks forward to doing some games that the center organizes. Finds joy in games as activties simulate his mind, and there is banter / jokes / coversation with fellow players	He sees some people just being there all day without talking to anyone. He doesnt know if they are lonely but he tries to talk to them. Not talking to anyone all day is biggest worry for him personally	asked about his friends or people he meet. Language plays a barrier : many older folks are mandarian speaker only. It can be difficult for them to connect with non-mandarian speakers / volunteers even. Pride / shyness plays another role. A lot of old folks feel shy reaching out to new people as they dont know them
25/05/2026 12:11:40	Went to Lee Ah Mooi Old Age Home and spoke to one of the caretakers there. The center has significantly older folks that need high touch care. Large room with hospital style beds. Posters / Photos of earlier visits / volunteers - looked super old. Posters for legacy planning. Very short discussion as she wasnt open to discuss more.										- Older folks with limited mobility at the center - Dont see many visitors from family - Even volunteers are rare and far in between - Most interactions end up being with the nurses / cargivers at the center - Have had some volunteers in the past but they do for a limited period and go away - Very challenging as even elderly as much older and not super healthy, so they have limited interaction between themselves
25/05/2026 19:03:47	8am - Wake Up and Drink Coffee 9am- Go to market 10am - Go for a walk 1pm - Lunch 3pm - Nap 5pm - Go to Resident Committee Centre 7pm - Dinner	Neighbours. Have known them for decades.	NA	Loneliness is when I wake up without any activities	I try to join as many activities as possible but there	It's part of life. Children only come visit once in a wl	NA												